Be gentle with the warrior

Who gave his life

Then and now

To the war machine

So that you might stand

With placard in hand

Fearing no repercussion

Ending in death

See not the faces of the worn

By the flame in their eyes

Still burning with the belief in their nation

Do not extinguish it

With fraises of false accusations

Those that fight need no such politics

For they gave their all for those they love

For a chance

To feel the wind of freedom

On the faces of the children

Who come after them

Knowing they gave what others could not

And in the giving

Freed us all
